FLIGHT OF THE INDIAN MAID. A Fragment from an Unpublished Poem, BY W. H. C. HOSMER.

ALL PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF TH GRIPING the bloody weapon fast, Alive to every wandering sound, A hurried glance the Maiden cast The shadowy encampment round : Witless dreamed on the robber-band Of brother slain by woman's hand; No warrior in his blanket stirred: Waves wrangling with the rocks she heard And murmur winds around the trees, Mournful at times and wild by starts, As if imprisoned Dryades Were wailing in their knotty hearts. Streaming in agitated air Waved in loose flakes her unbound hair; While lambent and electric light By fits revealed the lake to sight, Giving the surge a fiery crest And chasing darkness from its breast.

Treading upon the grassy sod As if her foot with moss were shod-Fled on her errand Wunmothay, Nor paused to list or look behind,

While groves of outline undefined Before her darkly lay. Boldly she plunged their depths within, Though thorns pierced through her mocca And the black clouds unscaled at last [sin; Discharged their contents thick and fast, Drenching her locks and vesture slight, And blinding with large drops her sight. The grisly wolf was on the tramp

To gain the cover of his lair: Fierce eyes glanced on her from the swamp As if they asked her errand there: The feathered hermit of the dell Flew, hooting, to his oaken cell: Old tree-trunks, of proportions vast, Fought fer the last time with the blast, And near her fell with crashing roar That shook the cumbered forest floor. Huge grape-vines, tied in leafy coil To gray armed giants of the soil, Swung like a vessel's loosened shrouds Drifting beneath a bank of clouds.

But hurried on the forest child Though Night and Tempest in the wild Engendered sights and sounds of fear, And not one star of friendly ray Her dismal and her dangerous way Looked softly forth to cheer; Gliding through brake and watery fen, Unharmed she reached the woody glen,

Through which the swift Conesus winds,

And the blue lake an outlet finds. Weary with flight, her agile form Against a hemlock stem she leaned, From the rude buffet of the storm

By overhanging foliage screened. She tarried there till ceased the rain, Till moonshine silvered night again; And the hoarse clarion of the gale Changed its high note to dying wail; Then, freshened by a little rest, Adventuring forth upon her quest,

Along the creek's green marge she sped And water-drops the grove shook down, When air-gusts waved the branches brown, On her unsheltered head.

A wary glance around she threw, Where loomed the ruined Fort to view, Taught by the legends of her race, That haunted was the quiet place By vapory phantoms of the dead, Earth echoless beneath their tread, Stalking with fixed and freezing gaze 'Mid mouldering wrecks of other days.

DEATH OF WASHINGTON .- The following vivid and touching sketch of the last moments of the Father of his Country is from a letter in the Amer-

Passing through the great hall, ornamented with pictures of English hunting scenes, we ascended the oaken stair case, with its carved and antique balustrade. We stood at the door-we pressed the handle-the room and the bed where he died were before us. Nothing in the lofty drama of his existence surpassed the grandeur of that final scene. The cold which he had taken from exposure, in overseeing some part of his grounds, and which resisted the earlier domestic remedies that were applied, advanced in the course of two short days into that frightful form of the disease of the throat Laryngitis. It became necessary for him to take to his bed. His valued friend, Dr. Craik, was instantly summoned, and assisted by the best medical skill of the surrounding country, exhausted all the means of his art, but without affording him relief. He patiently submitted, though in great distress, to the various remedies proposed, but it be came evident from the deep gloom setting upor the countenances of the medical gentlemen, that the case was hopeless. Advancing insidiously, the disease had fastened itself with deadly certainty. Looking with perfect calmness on the sobbing group around him, he said-"Grieve not my friends -it is as I anticipated from the first-the debt which we all owe is now about to be paid- I am resigned to the event." Requesting Mrs. Washington to bring him two wills from his escritoire, he directed one to be burnt, and placed the other in her hands, as his last will and testament, and then gave some final instructions to Mr. Lear, his secretary and relation, as to the adjustment of his business affairs. He soon after became greatly distressed, and as, in the paroxysms which became more frequent and violent, Mr. Lear, who was extended on the bed by his side, assisted him to turn he, with kindness, but with difficulty, articulated "I fear I give you great trouble, sir-but-perhaps it is a duty that we all owe, one to another-I trust that you may receive the same attention, when you

As the night waned, the fatal symptoms became more imminent. His breath became more labored and suffocating, and his voice soon after failed him. Perceiving his end approaching, he straightened himself to his full length, he folded his own hands in the necessary attitude upon his chest-placing his finger upon the pulse of the left wrist, and thus calmly prepared, and watching his own dissolution, he awaited the summons of his Maker. The last faint hopes of his friends had disappeared. Mrs. Washington, stupified with grief, sat at the foot of the bed, her eyes fixed steadfastly upon kim; Dr. Craik, in deep gloom, stood with his face buried in his hands at the fire-his faithful black servant Christopher, the tears uncontrolled trickling down his face, on one side, took the last look of his dying master; while Mr. Lear, in speechless grinf, with folded hands, bent over his pillow on the other. Nought broke the stillness of his last moments, but the suppressed sobs of the affectionate servants collected on the stair-case; the tick of the large clock in the hall, as it measured off with painful their voices in the swelling anthem are doing, for distinctness, the last fleeting moments of his ex- the emancipation of mankind from the thraldom of istence, and the low moan of the winter wind, as it swept through the leafless snow-covered trees; the laboring and wearied spirit drew nearer, und nearer, to its goal; the blood languidly coursed slower and more slowly through its channels-the noble heart stopped-struggled-stopped-flatterupon which its finger had been placed-it fell at the side-and the manly effigy of Washington shall require it."

Temperance a Source of Pleasure. AN ADDRESS AT THE CONCERT OF THE FRANK-LIN TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

BY H. GREELEY. Ladies and Gentlemen-At the request of the Directors of the Franklin Temperance Society, 1 have undertaken to address you, in their behalf, in a few words appropriate to the time, the place, and the occasion. Overwhelmed as I have been through the week with other duties, I can but perform imperfectly the pleasing task assigned me, and must trust to a liberal draft on your partiality and forbearance. The origin, the progress, and the present condi tion of the Temperance Reform, are all familiar to you, or the most of you. Well do you realize how wonderous, how beneficent is that impulse which, originating with a few degraded victims of intemperance in a grog-shop, has overspread and irradiated this hemisphere. You are also familiar, at least by report, with that kindred revolution which has half obliterated the woes and degradation of unhappy Ireland. These inspiring facts are justly the theme of the Orator, the hope of the Philanthropist, the burthen of Song. Wherever the glad tidings have sped, they are inspiring new hopes for humanity; they loosen the chains of the slave scorching under torrid suns; they warm the hear of the lover of our race, though shivering upon the ice of either pole. And, while this great surge of reformation sweeps over lands yet unvisited by its gladdening influences, while wave after wave of its healing waters shall continue to break over our own happy land, effacing yet more and more completely the ravages of man's greatest physical cursebe it ours to meet often in ardent support of, or fervent rejoicing over, the great phenomenon, and to meditate, not only on its practical development, but its higher aspect also in the moral phases preented by the Temperance reformation. And to my mind, I confess, the most gratifying, and at the same time most intensely natural aspect of this great movement, is the blending of Desire with Duty, of Enjoyment with imagined Self-Denial, of truest Pleasure with loftiest and most unselfish Endeavor, which appears to me a prominent feature of the Temperance Reformation .-There are thousands in every community, there are many doubtless around me, who enlisted in the Temperance cause with many a regret for departed pleasures, with a wishful looking back to the exhilarating bottle and sparkling glass, like Lot's wife to the burning vale of Sodom. They took the pledge with a full purpose, because they felt in this alone was safety to themselves, was example to the untainted, was admonition to the fallen and falling. They took the pledge as an act of duty, sternly demanded by the tears of hopeless wives, by the cries of famished children, by the universal wail of suffering humanity. But few or gone hoped to find in Temperance itself an indease of their enjoyments, an independent, unfailing source of pleasure. They turned their backs on the lights, the exhibaration, the music around the social board where the wine-cap cir cled, and stepped out into what seemed to them an atmosphere of cold, and storm, and darkness, sustained and cheered alone by their resolution to repel the seductions of the syren ere she had lured them to destruction, or ere their unharmed dalliance had emboldened others to venture to their ruin. They shook off from their feet the dust of this fair-seeming palace of gilded pit-falls, resolved that the blood of souls should not stain their garments, and that they would no longer tempt the bolt of destruction in order to enjoy the pleasures with which it was gaily enwreathed. Such were the feelings with which thousands have enlisted in the cause of Temperance. How that, in renouncing alcohol, they have renounced no real enjoyment, but a deadly poison of all true happiness, of all enduring pleasure! The dark ness which they so dreaded in the prospect, they find illuminated by all the stars of heaven; the bleak winds they shrunk from are changed to airs of Eden; instead of banishment from the delights of society and friendship, they find in Temperance the ligaments of a warmer as well as a purer friendship than they had before enjoyed; the elements of a social sympathy mere expansive and genial than the maddened devotion of Alcohol can ver know. The mutual effort to arrest a great, overshadowing evil; to preserve the unsullied and rescue the fallen; what should afford a foundation for society and pleasures, if this does not? And Music too-shall this be enjoyed only in unison with flying corks and jingling glasses? O! not so have we learned in the school of Temperance; not such the self-denial she imposes on her disciples .-Where the songs of Bacchus and his votaries were powred forth infull-throated dissonance by a score of midnight worshipers, an hundred voices are now raised to celebrate in liquid numbers the praises of Temperance; and as the statue of Memnon, by some mystic influence, was heard to other strains of celestial melody, so is the rising of the sun of Temperance heralded by strains of gladdening music from every corner of the land. Surely, none who enjoy with us this evening will ever after fear that the ascendency of Temperance will be fatal

to the delights of Song! And this leads us to a consciousness of the vas extent, the far-reaching influence of the Temper ance Reform, which seems to many so narrow, so circumscribed. "Why preach so lond and so long against intoxicating liquors?" says a caviler, "is there not excess also in eating, and perversity in ten thousand things? Why strive so earnestly exclusively, against this solitary evil?" The answer of true philosophy imports that not only is this one evil intimately connected with, and the fruitful parent of, other evils, but our reforming movement, though aimed immediately at one, strikes with a certain aim at all. He who has truly learned that Intemperance is wrong, and Abstinence the proper remedy, has mastered the essential argument in favor of all virtues and against all vices. It needs no separate process to enlighten him with regard to the nature of other evils the consequence of other transgressions. And when we see even our social Music regenerated, and from the slave of dangerous indulgence and vicious excess transformed into the handmaid and support of Virtue, why may we not hope all things from this spirit, and have faith that it is sufficiently expansive to enfold all possible good? A profound thinker of our age has written There are few graves, of those we have known at all intimately, on which Error of some sort does not sit to mock and accuse us as we pass.', A fearful sentence is this to those who are compelled to realize and make personal application of its truth! Especially must it fall with crushing weight on the heart of him, who, as he bends over the grave of a former friend or companion, is forced to the reflection, "I tempted him to luxurious indulgence-I challenged him to drain with ne the wine-cup at the maddening revel-I was emong those who led him to the destructive nabits which have hurried him down to a dishonored grave." Terrible, remorseful reflection flow different, how gloriously different, the remembrance of one who can truly, joyfully say-" I have aided in the rescue of at least one human being from degradation and untimely death; I have, by precept, entreaty, or song, strewed some flowers in the path of virtue, and lightened, as far as I had power, the load of evils resting on some member of the great family of Man."

Brethren and friends in the great work of Temperance! such is the high vocation to which we are called; this is the glorious victory which none of us are too humble to achieve. Each of us may do something, as those of us who to-night lift degrading appetite, of debasing vice. May we be found worthy of the glorious career which is thus wened before us!

It only remains that I should return the grateful thanks of the Franklir Temperance Society to all who have patronized it by attending our Coned-the right hand slowly slid from the wrist, cert this evening, but especially to these who have so freely, so generously given their services to make that Concert worth attending. May you all, was all that remained, extended upon the death friends of our noble cause, reap the certain and rich reward of well-doing!

O! YE SICK and Crippled! Now IS THE TIME—I read in the Tribune of this morning that the celebrated Steam Doctor, John Thomson, rom Albany, had taken quarters at 343 Broome street, near the Bowery, and I called to see the fellow and there found several other persons awaiting their turns to be served with his Medicines. I thought I had as good a right to have some medicine as any of them, as I had come about 550 miles in pursuit of health, and after the coast was clear the fellow walked tight straight into me rough shoit; he told me all alked right straight into me rough shod; he told me all walked right straight into me rough short; he told me all my present feelings better than I could myself without help, and those which I had suffered under for a long time past. In fact his story was so plansible that I told him to go to work; and I disclose to you that in half an hour I felt more relief than I had before in five weeks. It may not last but so far so good. I at any rate got the worth of my money in comfort. I would, therefore, advise all who want relief from chronic complaints, to call and see Dr. THOM-SIN and those what do not wish com out from disease. Its timely administration has been attended with the happiest results in many anomalous affections; but it is chiefly intended to fill the void which exists between cathactic and aperient medicines, hence its modes are results in the color of the color nce its modus operandi is that of all alterative directly; indirectly, proving a lasting tonic to the system. Diseases of the osseous and glandular system, also of the joints and ligaments, are safely and certainly cured by its use, as the peculiarity of its operation consists in removing the germ or cause of disease, and the health of the patient isspeedily re-

Sarsaparilla has enjoyed a high reputation in the treat-ment and cure of diseases for many years, but the value of no other article in the Materia Medica, that at one time held ment and cure of diseases for many years, but the value of no other article in the Materia Medica, that atone time held so high a rank, has at others been placed so low: the cause of which is chiefly owing to the great variation in the manner of its preparation, and want of care in selecting the proper article. A distinguished medical writer who resided many years in the section of country which produces the best quality of Sarsaparilla truly observes, "of six or eight species of the root which I found growing in the woods, I never found but out to manifest to the taste any of tife sensible properties of the genuine medical Sarsaparilla, the rest being insipid and nearly inert." As the medical profession do not act as their own Pkarmacentists, but rely on the skill of the Apothecary for preparing and compounding different formulæ, it is a matter of the utmost importance that there should be a correct standard preparation of Sarsaparilla, on which the 'Faculty' and public generally can rely within-plicit confidence, such is the article now offered. It combines the Utile cum Dulac, and in many instances has given speedy relief and made a perfect cure when the patient was apparently fast verging to the grave. The proprietors have devoted many years in experimenting and testing various modes of preparation to enable them to concentrate in the in the most efficient form all the medicinal value of the root, and this most desirable result has been at last triumphantly accomplished by means of an entirely new, ingenious and and this most desirable result has been a last triangularity accomplished by means of an entirely new, ingenious and costly apparatus. The Sarsaparilla is combined with other articles selected wholly from the vegetable kingdom, all of which are the most powerful purifiers of the blood; and these are concentrated into a fluid extract of great power. these are concentrated into a fluid extract of great power. The patient therefore who uses this preparation has all combined that can be useful for the removal of his complaint.

The numerous objections to different forms in which Sar saparilla has been heretolore prescribed, are well founded: the quantity of sugar contained in the syrup, will in most instances nausente and surfeit the stomach, if a sufficient dose be taken to be of any benefit—the decoction, and infinion being so liable to spoil, combined with the difficulty of preparation, render them both comparatively useless and inert; hence the superior value and efficacy of the article now under consideration.

DARR'S LIFE PILLS-To the Public. The proprietors of the extraordinary medicines known by the name of PARR'S LIFE PILLS have established a wholesale branch of their house in New-York, at the Clar endon House, corner of Duane-street and Broadway. endon House, corner of Duane-street and Broadway.

The value of this medicine in billious complaints, blotches on the skin, choleramorbus, dysentery faintings, foul breath, heart-burn, headache, inflammation, indigestion, languor, liver complaints, piles, scrofula, and numerous other diseases, may be judged when it is known that the sale in Europe has increased to the engracous amount of 30,000 boxes weekly, equal to store than a rillion and a half yearly. From air great celebrity it is now sold in almost all parts of the globe. No medicine ever yet offered to the world, has so rapidly obtained such distinguished notoriety, and it is so gentle in its nature that it may be taken by the invalid, however weakly, being composed of the most innocent herbs.

For particulars of this astonishing medicine, together with the account of its remarkable and renowned discoverer. Thomas Parr, who lived to the extraordinary age of 150 years—see the book of his life, which may be had gratis of all the agents in New-York and other parts of the United

NOTICE to RUPTURED PERSONS.

Dr. A. G. HULL, No. 4 Vesey street, Astor House, New-York.—Persons afflicted with Enpures may rely upon the best instrumental aid the world affords, on application at his office, 4 Vesey street, New York, or either of cation at his office, 4 Vesey street, New York, or either of his numerous agents in the chief towns of the United States. Parents must be careful to examine the back part of Dr. Hull; in writing. None other are genuine or 12 he relied on as good. Dr. Hull guarantees cures to all otherwise healthy patients who call at his office for treatment. If the cure be not radical and permanent, so as to preclude the necessity of wearing any trues whatever, the money advanced is returned on the expiration of the term secified for the cure whatever. the expiration of the term specified for the cure, whatever progress the rupture may have made toward eradication.
Children under twelve years universally cured without further expense than the cost of the Truss. The radical cure has been under progressive practical improvement for more than twenty years past, in Dr. Hull's Truss Office, and is now brough! to a state of unrivated perfection. Many treacherous agents have undertaken to vend imita-tions of Dr. Hull's celebrated Hinge and Pivot Truss for the easy and safe retention of Ruptures. The imitations cannot be relied on—they are made by unskilful surgeons and mechanics, and are no better than the ordinary Trusses of the market. The genuine have my full name in writing.

AMOS G. HULL & CO.

Dr. Hull has at the request of several respectable physicians, fitted up a room exclusively for Ladies, having separate entrance from the husiness department, wherein a lady is in constant attendance, to apply Trusses and Supporters to female patients.

THE TRUSSES and SUPPORTERS of Dr. Hull's invention continue to receive my decided pasterence. For twenty years past I have employed the Trusses of Dr. Hull with success. The supporter was invented in 1881 by the Dr., with my advice and approbation; and I am happy to say that it is extensively adopted in Enrope as well as in this country.
